Youngsters rolled up their sleeves and got stuck in during a Discover and Dig event.

Roman relics were hidden in sandpits to recreate an archaeological dig and children got to make their own Roman tiles from clay.

The drop-in session was held at Tring Library in High Street on Saturday morning (July 25).

Nina Bevan, assistant curator from the Dacorum Heritage Trust, which organised the event to mark the Festival of British Archaeology, said: "We buried Roman artefacts in the sand and then the children recreated being an archaeologist. We had all sorts of other artefacts on display.

"It was really popular. We had about 60 people in total come along and more than half of those were children."

Staff from the charity will be at Berkhamsted Library in Kings Road this Saturday (August 1) from 10.30am to 1.30pm for more dig sessions.

Everyone is welcome to go along.
