Now known for its market, Bovingdon airfield played a key role in the Second World War, being home to the American Air force between 1943 until 1963 after being constructed by John Laing and Son in 1941 to 1942. The airfield itself was shut down in 1972 and is now used for the market on Saturdays and bank holiday Mondays. The airfield is also known for being a featured location for many films and television series including Harry Potter and The Deathly Hallows Part 1, Midsomer Murders and is the filming location for Dancing on Ice.
